ROWLAND+BROUGHTON ARCHITECTURE/URBAN DESIGN/INTERIOR DESIGN ADDS AIA COLORADO AND AIA DENVER 2016 HONORABLE MENTION AWARDS TO THEIR ROSTER OF ACCOLADES

RESIDENTIAL OVER $1 MILLION CATEGORY FOR “GAME ON” ASPEN HOME

ASPEN, CO—October 19, 2016—Rowland+Broughton Architecture/Urban Design/Interior Design is thrilled to announce that our “Game On” Aspen home project has received 2016 Honorable Mention Awards in the Residential Over $1 Million category, from both AIA Colorado and AIA Denver. The awards were presented during the 2016 AIA Colorado & Local Design Awards Gala in Copper Mountain on October 6.

Judged by architects from across the nation, the winning projects were recognized for design, materials, aesthetics, space, and build. “The diversity and beautiful work of all of the firms who put their heart and soul into creating magnificent works of architecture are truly spectacular to see,” said Cathy Rosset, Executive Vice President/CEO of AIA Colorado. “We are honored to recognize these Colorado architecture firms for exemplifying the highest standards of professionalism, integrity and competency.”

Rowland+Broughton Director of Culture, Izzi Wagner, shared, “We are so appreciative of these AIA awards. Once again, our professional peers have recognized the vision, skill and effort behind “Game On,” which was also featured in the July issue of Dwell magazine. 2016 continues to be a spectacular year for R+B, underlining the remarkable efforts of our entire Aspen and Denver team.”

Led by R+B Principals, Sarah Broughton, AIA, and John Rowland, AIA, the “Game On” project team included Dana Ellis, Associate AIA, LEED AP, Amanda Christianson, LEED AP, Director of Operations and Liz Whyte, Associate AIA, LEED GA.

About “Game On”

Inspired by the residential vernacular of Aspen’s historic West End neighborhood, this LEED Gold Certified home brings a sense of clarity and elegance to a traditionally ornate Victorian form. With the clients’ personal and professional lifestyle in mind, the design is intended to accommodate a large number of guests for entertaining, yet provides a sense of intimacy for private relaxation. The open plan connects the indoor and outdoor spaces with seamless lift and slide pocket doors. Interiors feature custom built-in and floating furnishings and custom fixtures.

Pure in form and with modern articulation, the home is modern and efficient with no unused space. A simple gable roof, patterned siding and traditional front porch are an ode to Aspen’s Victorian past. A small bridge over a stream in the front entry path accents the minimal landscaping.

“Game On” is the result of a historic landmark lot split, in which the neighboring 1890s home was originally on one large lot. The neighboring home was picked up and placed on a new foundation, creating a vacant lot for “Game On.” The design required approval by Aspen’s Historic Preservation Commission and needed to stand on its own, while being contextual with the historic resource. The purity and execution of the detailing further distinguishes “Game On,” bringing a greater clarity to the traditional gable form.
