FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ROWLAND+BROUGHTON ARCHITECTURE AND URBAN DESIGN RECEIVES AIA COLORADO WEST AWARD OF CITATION FOR WOODY CREEK HOME

ASPEN/DENVER, CO – September 1, 2010

Aspen and Denver-based architecture firm, Rowland+Broughton Architecture and Urban Design, was honored with an award of citation by the Colorado West Chapter of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) on Friday, August 28th, 2010. The award, given at the Colorado West Awards Gala in Beaver Creek, recognizes achievement in design excellence. The honored firm's work must demonstrate economy of means in a renovation by the reuse of construction materials as well as design and construction practices.

The firm specializes in residential renovations with a focus on sustainability. For the award-winning home, an entire volume was added to the existing 1970's home. All efforts were geared toward to retaining, re-using and repurposing as much of the existing home with minimum site disturbance."We are honored to receive this award from the architecture community. Sustainability is at the very foundation of our guiding design principles and this home is a manifestation of those principles as a significant amount of material was salvaged. We are so grateful to AIA Colorado West for their organization and planning of the awards events, we look forward to participating every year," states John Rowland, AIA/Principal, Rowland+Broughton Architecture.

Rowland+Broughton Architecture and Urban Design was established in 2003. Today R+B is a bustling 12 person design 'think tank' with offices in Denver and Aspen. Having both an urban and small town office has given the firm the opportunity to work on a wide range of project types and sizes. Their diverse project portfolio includes commercial, hospitality, high-end residential, interior design, institutional master planning and new town planning.
