

contemporist

rowland+broughton Have Designed The 'Game On' House In Colorado

July 30, 2018

Photography by Brent Moss

Architecture firm rowland+broughton have designed 'Game On', a contemporary house in Aspen, Colorado, that features a simple gable roof, patterned siding, and traditional front porch, all of which are a nod to Aspen's Victorian past.

The neighboring historic home from the 1890s was originally on one large lot, but the property was sub-divided, and the historic home was picked up and placed on a new foundation creating a vacant lot for the new home.

Photography by Brent Moss

Inside, the home has numerous built-in elements, like the entryway bench that lines up with the vanity in the guest bathroom.

Photography by Brent Moss

The entryway opens up to the social areas of the house. The open floor plan allows the mostly white kitchen to flow into the living room, that features a built-in fireplace.

Photography by Brent Moss

Behind the living room is the dining area, with a built-in banquette bench that runs the length of the wall. Connecting the indoor and outdoor spaces are seamless lift and slide pocket doors.

Photography by Brent Moss

Outside, there's a covered area with a lounge and fireplace, an outdoor BBQ kitchen, and a bocce court.

Photography by Brent Moss

Back inside and there's wood stairs with a simple metal handrail that lead upstairs.

Photography by Brent Moss

Upstairs, the bedroom features a custom designed built-in wood bed frame with floating bedside tables.

Photography by Brent Moss

In the bathroom, the materials have been kept simple, and a hidden lights have been under the floating vanity.

Photography by Brent Moss

Get the contemporist daily email newsletter – sign up here