Colorado Architects and Firms Recognized with 2020 Design and Leadership Awards

August 20, 2020 (DENVER)—The American Institute of Architects (AIA) Colorado recognized local architecture firms for outstanding design at the AIA Colorado Design and Honor Awards Celebration on Monday, August 17, at the Denver Mart Drive In. AIA Colorado additionally awarded local architects for their leadership in the profession.

Through jury selection, design awards were given to a selection of Colorado-designed projects that exemplified innovative use of materials, space and design, as well as creatively addressed the design challenge.

Awards of Distinction were given to exemplary projects based on the location of the architecture firm to highlight the diversity and talent of AIA members across Colorado. Projects which received an Award of Distinction then automatically advanced for statewide award consideration in the following levels: Honorable Mention, Award of Merit, or the top award: Award of Excellence. See award recipients on following page.

In addition to the design awards, local architects were recognized with Honor Awards for their breadth of work, leadership in the profession, and contributions to their communities and to the state of Colorado.

- Architect of the Year: Paul S. Haack, AIA, Anderson Mason Dale
- Young Architect of the Year: Jenna Michieli, AIA, Anderson Mason Dale
- Firm of the Year: Rowland+Broughton Architecture / Urban Design / Interior Design
- Young Firm of the Year: Tomecek Studio Architecture
- 25 Year Award: Denver International Airport Passenger Terminal
- President's Award (selected by AIA Colorado President, Adam Harding, AIA): Jerry Johnson, Hon. AIA, Lobbyist
